Connected Hearth Announces Installation Partner Program

(Amagansett, LI, NY...June 15, 2004) Connected Hearth today announced the Connected Hearth Installation Partner (CHIP) program. The CHIP program enables security and alarm, home automation, audio/video, and other home technology installers to earn a monthly recurring revenue. Installers also earn profit selling and installing Connected Hearth's exclusive technological innovation, the Connected Hearth's Internet Gateway (CHIG).

Engineered by Connected Hearth, the CHIG is a small device that connects any Home Automation, Inc. Omni controller to the Internet via a broadband Internet connection. Connected Hearth Installation Partners sell and install the device. With the CHIG installed, ConnectedHearth.com subscribers are able to monitor and control their homes via the Internet, without requiring a dedicated PC in the home.

"Through the ConnectedHearth.com website, our customers are able to monitor their security systems, control their heating and cooling, pan a camera throughout their home, adjust lighting and even have a hot cup of espresso waiting for them when they arrive, " states company founder John Thorsen Jr. "ConnectedHearth.com customers gain peace of mind, realize time, energy and security monitoring savings, and even get up to 18% homeowner insurance discounts!"

Connected Hearth Installation Partners receive a third of the monthly subscription customers pay to Connected Hearth. "The CHIP program is a terrific opportunity for home technology installers to earn recurring revenue in addition to increasing their time and material billing," says Thorsen. Connected Hearth Installation Partners receive free technical support and a ConnectedHearth.com subscription, and are listed on the ConnectedHearth.com website.
